Juan Ovalle Castillo

Juan Ovalle Castillo has been an environmental activist for as long as he can remember. Although camping and hiking are terrific ways to commune with nature, he wants us to remember how important everyday environmentalism is. Eliminating disposable items keeps materials from being harvested, then trucked to landfills. Use a travel mug, bring your canvas bags to the grocer. He takes a bike for errands, that reduces gasoline use and the need for parking spaces. Juan lives near the 710 freeway called the Deiseal Death Zone for decades. We need to more effectively address Goods Movement and transportation for immediate air quality and long-term Climate Chaos.
