

August 17, 2017

The Honorable Ryan Zinke
Secretary
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street NW
Washington, DC 20240

Dear Secretary Zinke,

We, the undersigned veterans, stand in opposition to the expansion of offshore drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) due to concerns that new drilling could harm our military readiness. The Department of Defense (DoD) has maintained for years that certain areas in the Outer Continental Shelf are not compatible with military operations. The DoD conducts essential military testing and training in many of the 26 Outer Continental Shelf planning areas.

As a fellow veteran, you understand that military preparedness and the ability to fight and win in today's dynamic global environment is the DoD's top priority and a matter of national security. We are concerned that your proposed rewrite of the 2017-2022 five year plan will prioritize offshore oil and gas drilling, and oil company profits, over our military's operational readiness.

The eastern Gulf of Mexico planning area is especially critical to the DoD due to the number and diversity of military testing and training activities conducted there. In the areas east of the Military Mission Line, drilling structures and associated development would be incompatible with military activities such as missile flights, low-flying drone aircraft, weapons testing, and training.¹ In a April 26, 2017 letter, the DoD stated that the continued moratorium on drilling in the eastern Gulf of Mexico is essential for developing and sustaining our nation's future combat capabilities.

The incompatibility of offshore drilling and our military is not exclusive to the eastern Gulf. Naval Station Norfolk is the world's largest naval base. Due to safety and the desire to maintain military readiness, the DoD determined that "no oil and gas activity" should occur in seventy two percent of the area then designated as Virginia Lease Sale Area 220. The DoD determined that any oil and gas development infrastructure and activity in this area would jeopardize its operations.²

²United States., Department of Defense., Office of the Deputy Secretary of Defense for Readiness. (2010). Report on the compatibility of Department of Defense (DoD) activities with oil and gas resource development on the outer continental shelf (OCS). Washington, DC?: Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Readiness, Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Installations and Environment, Office of the Director, Operational Test and Evaluation.

The Pacific Ocean also faces drilling restrictions from the Pentagon. Thirty six percent of the Southern California Planning Area faces site specific stipulations, no permanent oil and gas surface structures, or no oil and gas activity due to military conflicts.²

Finally, sea level rise due to climate change is threatening our military bases. In June 2014, the U.S. Army Engineer Research and Development Center, as contracted by DoD Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program, released a study entitled “Risk Quantification for Sustaining Coastal Military Installation Assets and Mission Capabilities.” “Based on the analysis of Naval Station Norfolk’s site-specific vulnerabilities, the project team found sea level rise to be a significant and pervasive threat multiplier to mission sustainability, significantly increasing loadings on built infrastructure, and dramatically increasing risks to system capabilities and service provisioning.”³

On July 29, 2015, the Pentagon released a report on the security implications of climate change. The report found that climate change is a security risk “because it degrades living conditions, human security and the ability of governments to meet the basic needs of their populations. Communities and states that already are fragile and have limited resources are significantly more vulnerable to disruption and far less likely to respond effectively and be resilient to new challenges.”⁴

For all of these reasons, we stand in opposition to the expansion of offshore drilling on the Outer Continental Shelf. We urge you to keep the current five-year offshore drilling plan in place and not revise the program to remove restrictions against drilling in the Atlantic, Pacific, Arctic and eastern Gulf of Mexico.

Thank you for your consideration. We look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Air Force Colonel Christopher Stevens
Lompoc CA

Air Force Colonel Anne McGee
Portland OR

Air Force Lieutenant Colonel Angela Pond
